Dear [Recipient's Name],

I hope this letter finds you well. I am writing to formally appeal for the extension of the eviction moratorium as it pertains to vulnerable tenants in our community, including myself.

As you might be aware, the ongoing challenges posed by the [specific situation, e.g., COVID-19 pandemic] have severely impacted the financial stability of many tenants who are unable to secure consistent employment or face health-related obstacles. I am currently facing [briefly explain personal circumstances, e.g., job loss, medical issues], which have made paying my rent particularly difficult.

The eviction moratorium has provided critical protection for individuals and families like mine during this unprecedented time. An extension would not only alleviate the immediate threat of housing instability but also give us a chance to recover and rebuild our lives.

I kindly urge you to consider the plight of vulnerable tenants and the consequences of eviction on families and communities. Your support in extending the eviction moratorium would be invaluable in providing us with the essential time needed to navigate through this crisis.

Thank you for your attention to this matter, and I look forward to your positive response.

Sincerely,
