Dear [Academic Committee/Advisor's Name],

I am writing to formally appeal my academic probation status and to provide context regarding my recent academic performance. I acknowledge that my grades do not reflect my capabilities, and I take full responsibility for the challenges I faced this past semester.

Despite my academic struggles, I have been heavily involved in various extracurricular commitments that have enriched my university experience. I have dedicated significant time to [mention specific extracurricular activities or organizations, e.g., student council, volunteering, sports teams, etc.]. These roles have not only helped me develop invaluable skills in leadership and teamwork but have also contributed to my personal growth.

Balancing these commitments while managing my coursework proved to be more difficult than I anticipated. However, I recognize the importance of prioritizing my studies and am taking proactive measures to improve my academic performance. I am currently implementing a structured study schedule and seeking academic support through tutoring and workshops offered by the university.

I respectfully request a reconsideration of my academic probation status. I am committed to enhancing my academic standing and believe that with my experience and dedication, I can successfully balance my commitments moving forward.

Thank you for considering my appeal. I appreciate your understanding and look forward to continuing my journey at [University Name].

Sincerely,
