Dear [Recipient Name],

I hope this message finds you well. I am writing to propose a collaborative effort for a joint special issue focused on [topic of interest]. Given our mutual interests and expertise in [related field/topic], I believe this initiative could greatly contribute to the ongoing discourse within our community.

The overarching theme of the special issue would be [theme details], with an emphasis on [specific aspects]. We could invite leading researchers to contribute their insights and findings, thus providing a comprehensive overview of recent advancements and future directions in this area.

I envision a timeline that includes [proposed timeline for submission, review, and publication]. I believe that together, we can effectively promote this special issue, attracting high-quality submissions and reaching a wider audience.

I am keen to discuss this proposal further and explore how we can jointly develop this idea. Please let me know a suitable time for us to connect, or feel free to share any initial thoughts you might have.

Thank you for considering this proposal. I look forward to the possibility of collaborating on this exciting project.

Warm regards,
