To Whom It May Concern,

I am writing to express my deep concern regarding the affordability of universal healthcare. While the concept of providing healthcare access to all citizens is commendable, the financial implications for individuals and families are a pressing issue that demands immediate attention.

Many people are struggling to pay for their basic healthcare needs, and the current proposals may not sufficiently address the underlying costs associated with medical services, medications, and preventive care. It is critical that any universal healthcare system takes into account the financial burden that can arise from increased taxes or out-of-pocket expenses.

I urge you to consider comprehensive solutions that ensure both accessibility and affordability for all, without compromising the quality of care provided. The health and well-being of our community depend on it.

Thank you for your attention to this important matter.

Sincerely,
